Generous people, 700 funds, each one with a passionate story and desire to improve Hawai'i

This fund is truly
by the people, for the people of West Hawai'i.

Founders of the West Hawai'i Fund and members of the fund's advisory committee enjoy a quiet moment on the Makaeo Park walking path; it is one of many grants made over the last 25 years from a group of donors who want the best for West Hawai'i.

The West Hawai'i Fund at HCF was initiated in 1990 by a small group of donors who wanted to create a permanent charitable resource for communities in the region. Twenty-five years later, Bill Hastings believes "the mission of the West Hawai'i Fund holds strong for all the same reasons initial donors were attracted."

Among those reasons is the fact that a rotating group of local community leaders serve on the fund's advisory committee and work with HCF to recommend where grants should go.

Having a finger on the pulse is one of the features that appealed to Craig Pickett, managing member of the firm that recently acquired Hōkūli'a. He, along with investors Rob Walton and Bill Pope, created the Hōkūli'a Community Fund, the newest fund to partner with the West Hawai'i Fund. "We like that a committee of local leaders, led by the pros at HCF, is administering grants for us," said Pickett. Within two months of establishing their fund, 10 grants of $3,000-$15,000 went to high-performing organizations serving West Hawai'i.

"Our geography and small population require a slightly different model of service," notes former committee member Georgine Busch, "and grants that provide unrestricted funding work especially well when needs change."

Hawai'i Island estate planning attorney Darl Gleed appreciates the fact that he can point his clients to the West Hawai'i Fund. "If they have specific charities in mind but don't want to manage the effort, or if they care about certain causes but don't know which organizations to support, HCF can help," says Gleed. "And my clients know that if something happens to this or that nonprofit, HCF will repurpose their gift to a cause they originally intended," he adds.

Thankfully, the West Hawai'i Fund's endowment has grown over the last 25 years, because while the needs of the community have changed, the need for help has not. 🌺

HCF geographic funds like the West Hawai'i Fund enable multiple donors to pool their contributions to benefit a specific location that is meaningful to them.

What brings me
joy is waking up knowing I have another day to make a difference in someone's life.

Mentoring younger colleagues in his office is part of Roger Higa's wish to give back in everything he does. For New York Life agent Kevin Martin, "seeing how Roger is helping the community makes me look at my work differently and think about ways I, too, could make a difference."

Roger Higa with some of the agents he mentors,
Cheng Medeiros, Melinda Kaneshige, and Andrew Chung.

In the years he spent as a recruiter for Zippy's, Roger Higa interviewed lots of high school students from Kalihi who were applying for their first jobs. "Hearing their stories, their struggles and hopes, had a big impact on me," said Higa. "I'd gotten to the point where I felt like I had everything; but what was missing was the ability to help people who weren't as fortunate."

With several others, he helped to create the Kalihi Education Coalition Scholarship Fund, which provides scholarships to well-deserving students from the Kalihi-Pālama area—many of whom are first in their families to go to college. "Even a small scholarship can have an impact on someone's life," explains Roger.

"HCF has really helped me make the kind of difference I've always wanted to."

Though he now works for New York Life mentoring 15 agents in the financial services and insurance industries, Higa still thinks of his life's purpose as being "all about helping others." He guides newer agents in the hopes that they will be not only successful, but also fulfilled. "I've brought several of my colleagues to HCF events so they can learn about charitable giving in Hawai'i, and when appropriate, share it as part of a larger conversation they are having with their clients."

"In my own little way, I'm hoping others will follow my lead." Roger encourages everyone to give, including his five-year-old daughter.

"Most people don't think they have the means for philanthropy," Higa admits, "but everybody can do something."

That something, in the case of Roger Higa, is quite a lot. 🌺

My parents and grandparents instilled in us this need to give back.

Kathy Richardson's parents established the first HCF donor advised fund on Kaua'i. She carries on their legacy of giving through her support of many organizations, including Island School, where she has gotten to know many of the children, including the kindergarten class pictured here.

When you are the descendant of four Missionary families, as Kathy Richardson is, philanthropy is in your bones. “I was raised to do this. I watched my grandparents and my parents work in the community and could see how happy it made them.” The influence of Kathy’s relatives—the Whitney and Rice families on her father’s side; the Lyman and Wilcox families on her mother’s side—can be seen throughout Kaua’i in the institutions they helped shape: YWCA of Kaua’i, Wai’oli Mission House, National Tropical Botanical Garden, Island School, Grove Farm Homestead, and others.

During the time her mother was on HCF’s Kaua’i Leadership Council (where Kathy currently serves as chair), she established the Goodale Family Fund, the first donor advised fund on Kaua’i. Years later, Kathy and her father set up a second fund, the Nancy Sloggett Goodale Fund, to honor her mother’s good work and fine example. “It’s pretty special to see the impact these two funds are having in the community,” observes Kathy.

“If it weren’t for HCF, my parents’ legacy would not live on.”

The giving legacy clearly lives on in Kathy Richardson, who describes her life as “working full time and volunteering full time.” She is energized by community service, and recruits others with her enthusiasm: “Give people the chance to become involved in a nonprofit and you’ll see ... they’ll feel good about it and want to do even more!” 🌸

HCF is currently the trusted steward for more than 200 donor advised funds across the state.

“It’s just a no-brainer. With a donor advised fund, you get to advise where and when to give grants, and HCF does all the work!”

KATHY RICHARDSON

With HCF's help,
we can leverage every dollar that goes out into the community.

One of the ways Paul Kosasa decided to invest in Hawai'i's future was to become a funding partner on an HCF program called Connecting for Success, which targets high-need students from 10 public middle schools, including some from Stevenson, pictured here.

Paul Kosasa inherited more than just the family business from his parents, Minnie and Sidney, who opened the first ABC Store in Waikīkī in 1964. “They instilled in me the responsibility to give back to the community and showed me the joy that comes from giving.”

He also credits fellow members of the Hawai‘i Community Foundation Board of Governors for inspiring him. “In the 19 years I’ve been on the board, I’ve learned so much about the impact of philanthropy from people like Sam Cooke and Dwayne Steele, and from many of today’s leaders, too.”

While Paul is quick to credit others, there are many people he himself has inspired. Many nonprofits and causes in Hawai‘i benefit from the seven funds the Kosasa family established at HCF. Among the causes they support are those that fall under Pathways to Resilient Communities, a multi-part initiative focused on helping struggling middle school students, families on the brink of homelessness, and vulnerable kūpuna.

“HCF’s experience with hundreds of nonprofits has exposed me to so many different challenges in our islands.”

For Kosasa, the decision to become a funding partner is based on the value HCF can bring to his philanthropy: “I look to HCF for help in identifying the highest priorities for the community and in leveraging every dollar that goes out,” he explains.

“They’ve helped me understand the real value of giving and measure the outcomes of my gifts.”

Whether it’s a small grant that makes a big difference to one family, or a pool of funds being leveraged to tackle tough issues, Paul Kosasa is carrying on the proud legacy of his parents to make the community a better place ... and inspiring others along the way. 🌸

HCF creates partnerships to tackle tough problems. The Kosasa Family Fund is one of 15 funders collaborating to address family homelessness and improve outcomes for high-need youth.

About Us

We help people make a difference by inspiring the spirit of giving and investing in people and solutions to benefit every island community.

Dear Partners and Friends,

To stay relevant in our 99th year of fulfilling the charitable wishes of individuals, families and businesses across Hawai'i, we've had to change with the times.

That doesn't mean simply adjusting to changes taking place ... it also means taking innovative approaches to problem solving and funding for issues that are a growing concern to the community. HCF's initiatives and partnerships are addressing Hawai'i's challenges and creating long-term change. (Read more on page 27.)

HCF takes a strategic approach to identifying where generous givers and dedicated nonprofits can make the greatest impact for the people of Hawai'i. Whether we're working with individuals, families, organizations, or networks, the greatest value we can bring to those who have entrusted us with their resources is to amplify the power of their giving.

The difference we are making in this community demonstrates the impact of these collective efforts. Behind the more than $46 million HCF distributed across Hawai'i in 2014 are remarkable stories about how giving has enhanced the lives of those in need and enriched the lives of those who give. Some of their stories are in this report.

Granted, many things have changed in the course of a century, and yet some things do not. It remains our privilege and our responsibility—as it has since 1916—to help people who do good, do greater.

Our Impact

We want to live in a Hawai'i where people care about each other, our natural resources and diverse island cultures ... a place where people's ideas, initiative and generosity support thriving, responsible communities.

The Hawai'i Community Foundation takes a strategic approach to identifying where, with our clients and partners, we can make the greatest impact for the people of Hawai'i.

Each one of the initiatives and partnerships in which we engage starts by:

- ✔ identifying the community's highest priorities
- ✔ establishing strategic goals for community change
- ✔ charting a path for how activities will accomplish targeted objectives

Initiatives

As a partner, funder or convener, HCF works to deliver the greatest community impact by collaborating with community leaders, government and nonprofits with shared goals to create long-term change and benefit communities across the state.

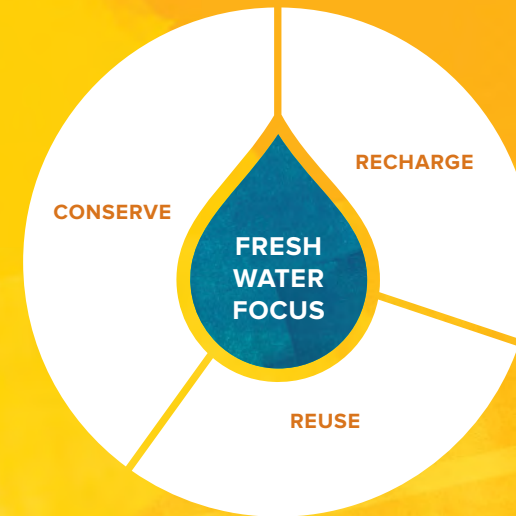

Fresh Water Initiative

Surrounded by the Pacific Ocean, it's easy for those of us in Hawai'i to appreciate that water covers 70% of Earth's surface. Harder to fathom is the fact that only three percent of the earth's water is fresh, and less than one percent supports all life on land.

The stark difference between "wet" and "dry" sides of our Islands has made water management pivotal in Hawai'i's history. Add to that a decrease of rainfall of 18 percent over the last 30 years; a population that has doubled since 1959; record levels of visitors; the reality that half of Hawai'i's watershed forests have been destroyed ... and the result is a potential fresh water crisis.

Against this uncertain backdrop, HCF created the Fresh Water Initiative in 2013. "HCF continuously looks for innovative approaches to really complex problems," said Josh Stanbro, Program Director of Environment & Sustainability at HCF. "Fresh water is at the center of our economy and ecology, we just thought it was too important to cross fingers and hope for the best."

HCF invited stakeholders from all sides of the issue—agriculture, private landowners, scientists, and government officials—to convene as a Fresh Water Council (Council).

CONSERVE
40+ million gallons per day by 2030
Improve the efficiency of our underground fresh water use.

RECHARGE
30+ million gallons per day by 2030
Improve storm water capture and protect more watershed areas.

REUSE
30+ million gallons per day by 2030
Double the amount of wastewater being reused in the Islands.

"HCF asked us to do something different. We were tasked to come up with collective recommendations for improving our shared water supply, even though many members came from opposing sides regarding use."

—TIM JOHNS, COUNCIL CHAIR

The result? A Blueprint for Action with a goal of providing 100 million gallons a day of additional reliable fresh water supply by 2030 via clear solutions that have broad, multi-party support.

"I've got to admit, I had my doubts," said Council member Sumner Erdman. "But HCF provided the space and structure to get to know one another, find common ground and ultimately come to agreement."

Unlike many Blue Ribbon Panels that disband after issuing their report, members of the Council have agreed to continue working together to help implement the recommendations.

Water, as we know, is essential to life. And collaboration, we've found, is essential to protecting our quality of life in Hawai'i.

NONPROFIT EXCELLENCE INITIATIVE

We believe that a vibrant and healthy community is a result of effective nonprofit organizations. Over the past 10 years, HCF invested more than $14 million in nonprofits across the state through grants, technical assistance and leadership development programs. Everything learned has culminated in HCF’s Nonprofit Excellence Initiative, supporting high-performing organizations that are able to deliver meaningful, measurable and sustainable results over a prolonged period of time.

The Nonprofit Excellence Initiative includes:

ADVANCING NONPROFIT EXCELLENCE BOARD AND EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

The conference engages board members and executive directors serving nonprofits across the state. The conference focuses on providing training, resources and dialogue on how to become a high-performing organization.

FLEX GRANTS

The FLEX Grants program launched in 2013 as a partnership of multiple funds to provide high-performing organizations in Hawai‘i with a source of flexible, unrestricted support that enables them to prioritize their own needs and enhance their effectiveness. In 2014, FLEX awarded $4.2 million to 168 high-performing nonprofits from 39 Advisory Committee, Donor Advised and Discretionary Funds.

HO‘OKELE AWARDS

Established in 2002 in partnership with The Wallace Alexander Gerbode Foundation, the award recognizes outstanding leaders in Hawai‘i’s nonprofit sector

2014 Ho‘okele Award Winners (L to R):
Suzanne Case, executive director, Hawai‘i Program, The Nature Conservancy
Nanci Kreidman, M.A., chief executive officer and co-founder, Domestic Violence Action Center
Howard S. Garval, president and chief executive officer, Child & Family Service
Nola A. Nahulu, artistic director, Hawai‘i Youth Opera Chorus

HAWAI‘I TECHNOLOGY TRANSFORMATION PROGRAM

In 2011, with the support of the Omidyar ‘Ohana Fund, HCF formed a partnership with the State of Hawai‘i to transform how government does business with and for Hawai‘i’s citizens. This large-scale 12-year initiative assists in the effective, efficient and convenient delivery of programs and services to the public through business process transformation and information technology modernization.

PATHWAYS TO RESILIENT COMMUNITIES

This initiative builds on the successful model of a previous funders collaborative, Hawai‘i Community Stabilization Initiative, which leveraged $4 million from 12 funders to help families and individuals access more than $23 million in services and benefits during the Great Recession in 2008. Pathways to Resilient Communities is a $12 million initiative supported by 15 funders focused on helping vulnerable populations in three areas – helping kūpuna in need, families facing homelessness and high-need middle school students.

HousingASAP

In 2014, HCF launched a three-year, $4 million, HousingASAP program designed to move more homeless families into stable housing faster, and keep them there. A group of eight nonprofits that are family homeless service providers were selected to participate in a network that will provide support and training on organizational effectiveness, building capacity, forming partnerships, and developing leadership.

Connecting for Success

Hawai'i County Mayor Billy Kenoi described middle school as “a time when kids’ values start coming together and they begin to think about the future ... exactly when we want to capture them.”

Many others—including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention—have also made the link between helping struggling youth ages 12-14 feel more connected to school and increasing the likelihood that they will graduate from high school on time and make healthier lifestyle choices going forward.

“The Hawai'i Community Foundation recognized the window of opportunity to intervene with vulnerable middle school students and the benefits of getting them back on track,” said Tammi Chun, HCF VP of Programs. So, too, did a group of 15 funders who HCF brought together to form Connecting for Success. Over three years, the program’s goal is to reach 1,500 high-need students with direct services and benefit 10,000 students in participating schools.

Grantees—10 middle schools and five nonprofit community partners—use real-time data on student attendance, behavior and grades using the DOE’s Early Warning System to flag students who are falling off-track.

Half of the 10 middle schools across the state that are receiving grants are paired with a community partner to further connect students to caring adults, both in and out of the classroom.

THE FOLLOWING FUNDERS AND DONORS HAVE COMMITTED SUPPORT FOR THE CONNECTING FOR SUCCESS PROGRAM FOR THREE YEARS WITH $8.1 MILLION IN FUNDING:

Aloha United Way	Cooke Foundation, Ltd.	Kosasa Family Fund at HCF
American Savings Bank	Harold K.L. Castle Foundation	Kresge Foundation
Atherton Family Foundation	Hawai'i Community Foundation	McInerny Foundation
Bank of Hawaii Foundation	Hawai'i Tobacco Prevention & Control Trust Fund	Omidyar 'Ohana Fund at HCF
Central Pacific Bank Foundation		Richard Smart Fund at HCF
		Stupski Family Fund at HCF

Grantees from participating schools also meet monthly—either electronically or in person—during the school year as a Community of Learners to exchange lessons learned and participate in professional development. “It’s a chance to accelerate everyone’s learning about what works and make adjustments quickly when they’re needed,” explains Chun.

In its first year, the results show that the program is moving in the right direction:

- 87% of participating students report positive experiences with the program and being more connected to school
- 89% of participating students passed all core classes at the end of the year

Without intervention, over 7,000 of this year’s Hawai’i’s students in 6th, 7th and 8th grades will not graduate from high school on time.

During the 2014-15 grant year, the goal is to improve student attendance which research shows to be a critical predictor of school success. The longer-term goal is to replicate strategies that prove to be effective across Hawai’i’s statewide school system.

Superintendent Kathryn Matayoshi sees the partnership as synergistic: “Connecting for Success is a good example of the philanthropic community coming together to support the strategic initiatives of the DOE,” she said.

Clearly, in connecting students to school, there are all kinds of connections being strengthened, and the results of collaborating are beginning to show.

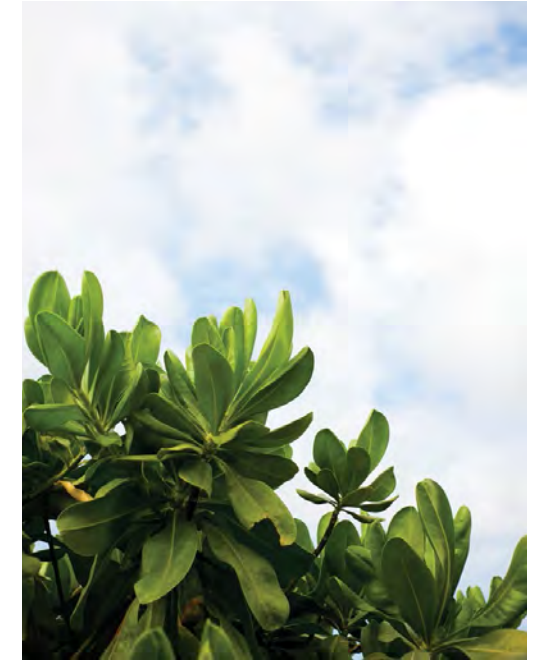

Partnerships

Recognizing that some of Hawai‘i’s toughest challenges require wide-angle solutions, and knowing that we can do more by working together than apart, the Hawai‘i Community Foundation is a catalyst for synergistic partnerships.

ARTISTS IN THE SCHOOLS

Through collaborative residencies, artists and teachers co-plan ways to weave art into the public school curriculum and help make learning experiential. As a result, students gain greater access to arts education, and teachers' capacity to teach both the arts and the existing curriculum is increased. In 2014, HCF partnered with the State Foundation for Culture and the Arts to support $5 million of artistic residencies in 92 schools statewide.

ENVIRONMENTAL FUNDERS GROUP

The Hawai‘i Environmental Funders Group (EFG) is a network of philanthropic individuals and institutions engaged in active, substantial grantmaking in the Hawaiian Islands. Convened and organized by HCF, the EFG's purpose is to foster collaboration among members and to steadily increase the amount of philanthropic support for environmental and sustainability efforts in Hawai‘i. In the past year, EFG partners have awarded more than $12 million to support projects from environmental education to sustainable agriculture.

HAWAI'I TOURISM AUTHORITY

HCF was selected by the Hawai'i Tourism Authority (HTA) to help develop and administer two grant programs that align with the interests of both organizations. HTA's Natural Resources and Kūkulu Ola: Living Hawaiian Culture grant programs fund initiatives within the community that advance the goals of preserving Hawai'i's natural resources and perpetuating Native Hawaiian culture. In 2014, HCF distributed more than $1.9 million to 65 organizations across the state on behalf of both HTA grant programs.

HAWAI'I TOBACCO PREVENTION AND CONTROL TRUST FUND

The Hawai'i Legislature created this fund in 1999 from a portion of the money awarded to the state as a result of the multi-million dollar settlement against the tobacco industry. Under a contract with the Hawai'i State Department of Health (DOH), HCF administers community grants to support tobacco prevention and cessation in areas including the Hawai'i Tobacco Quitline, advocacy efforts, program evaluations, and a statewide communications campaign. Since 2000, Hawai'i's smoking rates have decreased 32% and are the third lowest in the nation. Recent DOH data shows the impact of prevention in the last 15 years through decreases in death rates: 34% from heart disease, 41% from stroke and 11% from lung cancer.

HAWAI'I CHILDREN'S TRUST FUND

This program was established at the Hawai'i Community Foundation in 1993 as a public-private partnership with DOH. It supports programs aimed at preventing child abuse and neglect through grants for direct services, community events, public awareness, and advocacy. Community programs are primarily supported by a generous gift from the C.N. Wodehouse Hawai'i Children's Trust Fund Trust.

COMMUNITY RESTORATION PARTNERSHIP

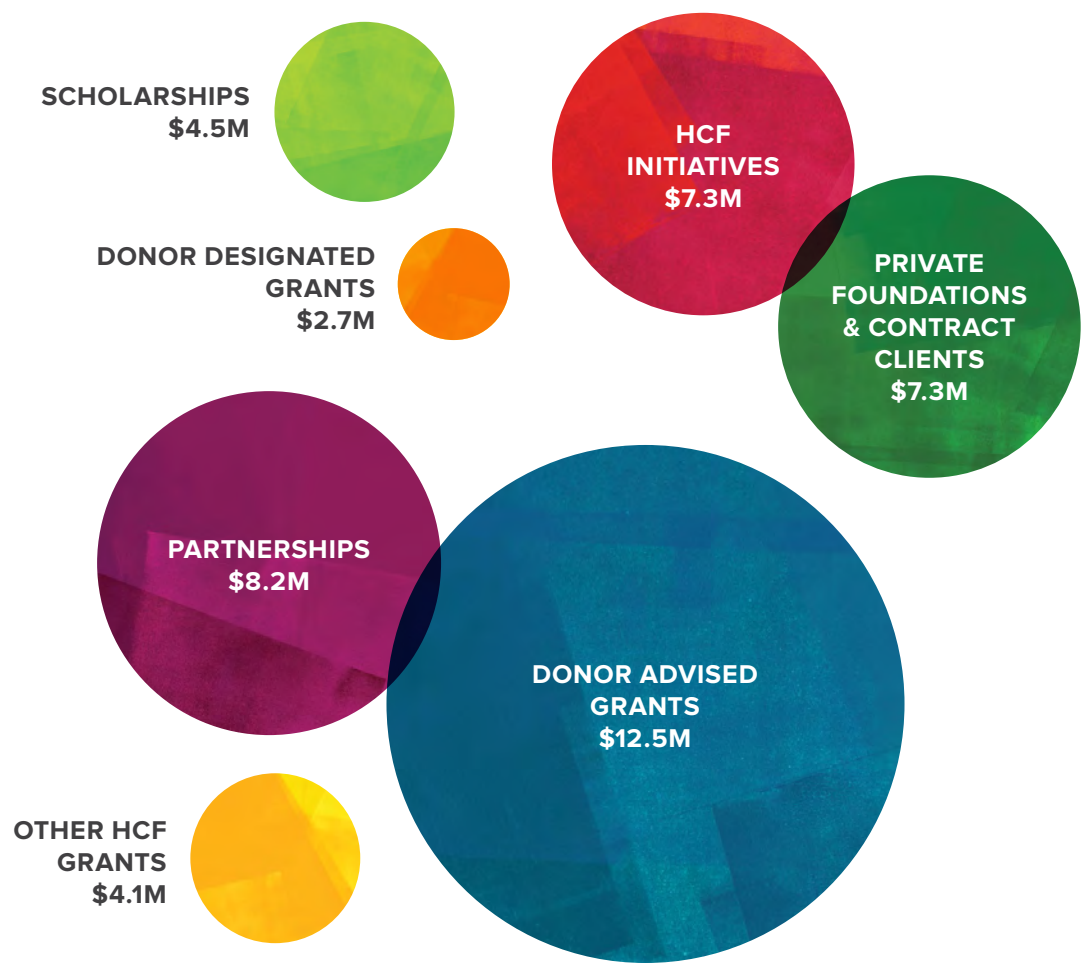

Through this pooled fund in 2014, the Hawai'i Community Foundation, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Harold K.L. Castle Foundation, the Hawai'i Tourism Authority, the Marisla Foundation, and the Weissman Family Foundation provided nearly $500,000 in direct grant support for habitat restoration projects led by local communities. The partnership has restored fishponds, stream banks, wetlands, and other sites at over 30 locations throughout the islands.

“I feel so blessed to be a part of helping students from Hawai'i achieve their educational goals. The most rewarding part is reading through their applications and getting to know each individual's personal challenges along with their commitment to succeed. It reassures me that our future is in good hands!”

Paul Horner is a donor to the HCF Community Scholarship Fund, Neighbor Island Leadership Council member, and Scholarship Ambassador for Kaua'i.

This past year, the daughters of Leonard Freeman, creator of the television show Hawaii Five-0, started the Leonard and Rose Freeman Family Fund at HCF. “Our father was devoted to writers and artists, as are we. Every artist needs to have a foundation so they can discover their own process without the constant stress and trauma of financial concerns. This fund enables real art to germinate from the heart.”

Jim Burns & Emme Tomimbang recently established two funds at HCF: the Burns-Tomimbang Charitable Fund, and the Emme Tomimbang Education Fund that benefits students pursuing a degree in journalism and broadcast media. When asked why giving is so important to them, Emme replied, “We can’t take it with us. It’s important to leave it to organizations, like HCF, so others can continue their good work for generations to come.”

Stewards of the Community

HCF’s capacity to serve the community is tied directly to its ability to preserve and enhance the financial assets it stewards. Towards this end, an Investment Review Committee, comprised of directors who are knowledgeable in investment and financial matters with the assistance of an independent investment monitor and HCF staff, oversees HCF’s investment activities. By declaration of trust, HCF manages active relationships with three local banks. HCF also utilizes several other investment firms whose strategy is consistent with its investment policy.

“Being part of a family foundation, I think often about the people who crafted this lasting gift when they formed it more than 100 years ago. As a trustee, it’s an honor to be a part of their incredible legacy of continuous giving. HCF helps us by keeping our long-standing family foundation compliant with the IRS and providing services to us with discretion, knowledge and integrity.”

Effie Ort, Trustee for the Fred Baldwin Foundation, administered by HCF.

2014 Volunteer Advisory Committee

Some funds at the Hawai‘i Community Foundation have advisory committees made up of thoughtful community leaders who provide their expertise to support the Board of Governors with grantmaking.
